

World Book Week activity Friday:

Earth Bake Off Challenge

Hello and welcome to Receptions Great World Book Day Bake Off! This week in the technical challenge, bakers have been busy looking at lots of different ways we can help look after our planet. Hopefully this will help them with today's showstopper challenge! Will this challenge be a fabulous show stopper or will the cakes end up on the floor? Let's hope not!

Due to our bakers currently not being allowed in the tent, we are hosting today's challenge from kitchens all around Ellington and the surrounding areas. We will also have some guest judges today but more about that later.

Today's showstopper challenge has been set by our very own judges, Paul Hollywood and Prue Leith. Hello judges, could you please explain what you are looking for from today's bake?

Yes, certainly. Today we are looking for a real show stopper. Bakers must make a sweet treat that represents the Earth. Cakes, cupcakes, biscuits, that is up to the bakers but they must show us their own version of Earth.

A real out of this world challenge!

Thanks for that judges. Now as we mentioned we are not allowed in the tent to bake at the moment so bakers are taking part from their own kitchens. This leaves us with a bit of a headache when it comes to judging but we have a plan. We need each baker to select a judge from their house, judges are NOT allowed to help in any way with the baking.

At the end of the bake the judge will award points out of ten for both taste and presentation so that is 20 points up for grabs!

Right there is only one more thing for us to say... on your marks, get set, BAKE!!!!!!!
